Mr. Davis, (dem.) of R.A., opposed the repeal of the Missouri compromise, being altogether averse to carrying slavery into territory now free. Whether this bill shall pass or not, the effects already produced, in arousing seitation in the North, were such as could not be avoided. Slavery, he insisted, is inconsistent with true democratic principles.

Mr. Tavion, (dem.) of N. Y., remarked that the excitement which this bill has produced is rapidly giving way to sober reason, which leads to right conclusions. He held to non-intervention in the local affairs of the Territories, including slavery. The Missouri act of 1820 is a mere law, repealable at the pleasure of Congress.

The Wilkesbarre Slave Case.

DECISION OF JUDGE KANE.
PRIMORFILM May 9, 1854.

Judge Kane to-day delivered a long opinion of the Circuit Court in the case of the United States Marshal versus the Sherifi of Philadelphia. The hearing was on a habeas corpus taken out to prevent the relators being taken to Wilkesbarre for trial, under an indictment found against them for an assault while executing a writ in Wilkesbarre, issued by the Circuit Court. The opinion says, though the Marshals cannot be tried by jury, if acting in obedience to federal process, they may be punished for abusing it, and by the Court that issued process, which is bound to punish or protect its ministerial officers. The Court will therefore proceed to have the case on its merits, under the act of Congress, and will receive the evidence of the relators.

Terrible Steamboat Explosion

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15-P. M San Francisco, April 15—P. M.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK HERALD.

The John L. Stephens is just going off, but I cannot forbear giving you a brief account of one of the most affecting and terrible explosions that we have had here since the Jonny Lind affair. A small steamer, called the Secretary, running as a daily packet between this city and Petzluma, about thirty miles up the bay, exploded this morning, instantly killing about thirty persons and dangerously wounding ten or twelve others. She was on her upward trip, and had on bearda bout sixty persons, all told. At the time of the bursting she was racing with a little toot called the Nevada.

Is me told that the passengers on the latter merely heard a report, as if a cannon had exploded, and looking the Septella Ly.

The Nevada picked up about fifteen survivors, and the and thirty human beings were in an instant hurled into eternity.

The Nevada pickel up about fifteen survivors, and the bodies of five others—all that was seen of the Secretary and her sixty passengers. All the officers of the boat were killed.
